ORLAND BISHOP: ONENESS IS ABUNDANCE

1. Orland states that the human individual “awakes to meaning when we find relationships that we can dedicate our own freedoms to.” What kind of relationships do you think he is talking about?
2. Orland says that we have an economic system that makes competition a necessity and scarcity a part of our economic worldview. How do you feel about this statement?
3. When have you experienced your personal worth to be determined by how much money you have?
4. What do you think Orland means when he says that slavery is worse in the twenty-first century?
5. What is Orland's understanding of revolution?
